

EAHIL Council Election - Candidate Statement
Country	United Kingdom
Name	Madeleine Still
Affiliation	Newcastle University
My professional education and experience	I worked in hospital libraries between 2008 and 2018 before moving into my current role as a research assistant in the evidence synthesis group at Newcastle University Population Health Sciences Institute. I am also in the process of completing a doctorate qualification in health and social care.
What I think is special about EAHIL	EAHIL is special to me for the way that it connects people and health information across Europe and further afield.
What I expect to contribute to EAHIL Council	Having been on the EAHIL Council for one term already, I hope to continue that by encouraging more people to join EAHIL and to work alongside other Council and Board members to drive the organisation forward.
What I think are the most important issues for European health information professionals in 2019-2022	At this time of global pandemic and Brexit, I feel that the most important issues remain promotion of open access/open data and collaborating more closely across borders to get the most up to date information and research to where it needs to be to benefit public health.
