What I think are the most important issues for European health information professionals in 2025-2028	Today, library customers increasingly no longer expect individual media. He expects aggregated information to help him solve problems. Libraries should adapt to the changing environment, redefining their role as institutions of learning and knowledge, taking into account the differentiating effects of the digital transformation and asking how the analog is changing in the digital environment We must change to the high results of digitalisation, create a professional marketing through research, which can really help to find out what the user wants.
My one-line statement	I invite you to reinvent the library to survive in the era of the digital
